CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION
LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY (LLC)

1. Company Identification

TheForge LLC (known simply as "TheForge" in-game) is officially formed as a Limited Liability Company. The owner is frodo1005. TheForge's main business is making, marketing, and selling enchanted gear and offering enchanting services, though the Company reserves the right to take on any other lawful business activity.

2. Ownership and Management

TheForge is a member-managed LLC. frodo1005 owns 100% of the Company — every vote and every share — and serves as its sole Member, Director, and CEO. That means frodo1005 makes all the decisions, runs day-to-day operations, and steers the business however he sees fit. No one else has a say or a stake unless Section 5 comes into play, which is when a new Member could be admitted. frodo1005 isn't personally on the hook for the Company's debts or liabilities — any loss can't go beyond what he's put into the business.

3. Capital Contributions

frodo1005 puts in the Company's initial capital, whether that's cash, assets, or services. If the Company ever needs more capital, or wants to bring in outside contributors, that call is entirely his — unless and until more Members are admitted under Section 5.

4. Profit and Loss Distribution

All profits and losses go straight to frodo1005 — no splitting, no sharing — unless the Company admits another Member and this Certificate is updated accordingly. frodo1005 decides when and how much to draw from the business.

5. Transfer of Membership

If someone new wants to go in, frodo1005 must approve of it. When that happens, the resulting ownership split will be written down and this Certificate updated to match. No one can transfer or hand off their share to someone else without frodo1005's sign-off — or, once there are other Members, without a majority of the remaining Members agreeing.

6. Dispute Resolution

If a dispute comes up — between the Company and a Member, or between Members — everyone agrees to try to talk it out in good faith first. If that doesn't settle it, the next step is filing suit in the relevant court of Redmont.

7. Amendments

frodo1005 has sole authority to amend this Certificate for as long as he's the only Member. Once more Members join, any amendment needs approval from Members holding at least 51% of the voting power — and that threshold can never be lowered.

8. Bylaws

TheForge can adopt bylaws to handle day-to-day details and internal procedures. But if a bylaw ever conflicts with this Certificate, the Certificate wins. Bylaws only carry weight for the matters this Certificate specifically hands off to them — anything beyond that isn't enforceable.

9. Dissolution

frodo1005 can shut the Company down whenever he decides to. Once there are more Members, a simple majority vote can do it instead. Either way, TheForge must settle its debts first, then split whatever's left among the Members according to their ownership share. Once everything's wrapped up, a Certificate of Dissolution gets filed with the appropriate authority.

10. Limitation of Liability

Members only risk what they've put into the Company. No Member is personally responsible for the Company's debts or obligations beyond their own equity.
